

Do You Feel Lucky? Well Do You?

By: John Brady - Fox River Networks

Clint Eastwood delivered that line as he was staring down a bad guy in Dirty Harry. That was a classic case of everything to lose and nothing to gain. If you know me, you have heard me spread the word about the importance of computer back up. You have everything to lose and nothing to gain if you don't take this serious. I know not everyone is listening because every day I get new clients that tell me, while they know how important back up is, they just haven't gotten around to doing it. I have the solution "On-Line Back-Up".

The two reasons not to back up your computer:

- You Really Do Feel Lucky
- You just don't care if you lose everything of importance that is on your computer

There is a company in the Chicago area that is advertising battery back up sump pumps for your home and they ask the question, "how many sump pumps will fail?" The answer is all of them.

We live in our homes long enough to need to replace mechanical features like sump pumps but we generally haven't kept our computers to the point that they experience major mechanical failures. I am not sure why but things appear to be changing now. I don't know if we are just pushing them harder these days or if the components are not lasting as long, but lately it seems many more people are experiencing the loss of their hard drive and all of the personal and work information that is on them.

How many hard drives fail? All of them. You will be lucky if yours lasts longer than you need it to. Do you store your family pictures on your computer and no where else? Do you have work or other materials that are important to you, how about your e-mails, and contacts? Would it take you more than 1 hour to recreate anything that was lost do to failure or even accident? Have you ever deleted a file only to regret it later? What if you could get it back before it was too late? Now that would be lucky!

If you are ready to preserve the work, the contacts, the communication and the memories on your computer, it really is very simple.

It's only costs about $50.00 per year, provides unlimited backup space for Personal Computers and your files are available to you anywhere you can get an Internet connection.

This is a Set It & Forget It type of program. It works in the background while your computer is on. If you have any problem setting this up, I can help. That is what I do after all, I help people with their computers through the Internet. If you are down the street or across the country, Help is Just a "CLICK" Away.
